

seba dalkai school

The Seba Dalkai School, in the Navajo Nation, is expanding from a K-8 boarding school into a K-12 facility for day students and boarders. This outdoor classroom building integrates PVs into the roof structure, and is being used as the basis for a curriculum in sustainable energy as well as for general education. The structure doubles as a stage for outdoor events.

This is one of the inaugural projects of Native American Photovoltaics (NAPV), a non profit group aiming to bring the benefits of electricity to the largest group of Americans who live without it.
